

Services to the General Insurance Market

Insurers are facing rapidly changing times driven by regulatory requirements (including Solvency II) and financial circumstances such as the credit crisis. This means that companies can often struggle to keep up to date and understand the implications to their business. Advisers with firsthand experience of these matters can help bring focus to the important issues and bring order to the chaos.

We can assist in-house actuaries where there are resourcing constraints, or where there is a need for specialist advice. Alternatively, we can simply provide a second opinion on certain crucial matters.

We advise insurance and reinsurance firms, auditors of insurance and reinsurance firms, Lloyd's syndicates, international companies, captive insurers and the public sector.

Experience

We have a broad experience of working in the UK and the international market, advising a range of firms, from small niche insurers to FTSE 100 listed companies.

We have the relevant practising certificates from the Actuarial Profession and other actuarial societies to carry out regulated roles. We keep our clients ahead in dealing with the constantly changing environment and help influence the direction of regulatory and technical standards through our representation on a number of professional bodies.
